Not Just About Casinos

Macau, best known as the Vegas of Asia, actually has many other attractions to offer. Taipa Village, a heritage district-turned-food and recreation hub, was developed as a sort of respite destination, juxtaposed with its neighbouring Cotai Strip. Its blend of Portuguese, Chinese and Mediterranean architecture supports diverse art, retail and dining establishments, the newest of which are four brilliant new restaurants offering seafood, Portuguese cuisine and healthy desserts, and a bakery.

Unexpectedly Super

It's one of the last items you'd expect to gain superfood status, but rice – in the form of Kinmemai's Better White and Better Brown – has made it. Said to have a mildly buttery, nutty flavour, these white and brown rice variants processed by Toyo Rice Corporation's specially developed Kinmemai Process have only their outer bran layer removed. Unlike traditionally polished rice, these grains supposedly retain their sub-aleurone layer and, with it, a whole host of vitamins and other nutrients.

New Season, New Tastes

Helmed by chef Jerome Merlo, who specialises in French bistro cuisine, The Temple Cafe in The Temple House in Chengdu, China, has already garnered a reputation for understated luxury. Now, it's launched a new farm-to-table Spring menu featuring organic vegetables and herbs from the hotel's in-house Herb Garden, taking that distinctive refinement that characterises

The House Collective establishments up a notch. Expect a modern take on well-known French dishes, artfully designed to allow the freshness of the hotel's carefully cultivated seasonal greens to shine through.
